

Camp Tough, Lessons Learned The Hard Way

This short story depicts the concerns of two fathers about their teenaged sons. Mathew Burns, a successful business man, and Stanley Collins, a section supervisor who works for Mathew, meet and discuss the issues they are concerned with about their sons, Sam and Bud. The boys have graduated from high school but they ignore the wishes of their parents and get involved with a local gang and also are sharing bad habits of alcohol, smoking, and drugs. The fathers form a plan to set the boys free to become self-reliant at an isolated camp site owned by Mathew located on a river in the back country of Alberta, Canada. The boys are faced with living in the wilderness by themselves, without any communications or electricity, and facing their issues alone with no adult supervision. Can they endure weeks and weeks of such solitude? There are lessons to be learned...the hard way.
