

North Korean Engagement: Balancing Risk and Opportunity

For more than half a century, the specter of a hostile, enigmatic and threatening North Korea has loomed large on the US. policymakers horizon. A nation of only 22 million with a GDP of $21.8 billion and a negative three percent growth rate, it is smaller than the state of Mississippi. Yet North Korea consumes the worlds attention far out of proportion to its size and truncated economic power. For the United States in particular, it is Thomas Jeffersons wolf, an issue no policy maker wants to take by the ears, yet once grasped, cannot be let go. North Korea has forced itself onto the world stage with an attack on South Korea, a one millionman army, nuclear weapons research, and a long range missile development program. Powerful communist allies and a belligerent attitude ensured it received disproportionate attention. While this provided sufficient impetus for U.S. concern, a sudden change in the geopolitical landscape argues for more immediate results.
