

Alfred Stieglitz: Masters of Photography Series (Aperture Masters of Photography)

Alfred Stieglitz was one of the most important cultural forces in twentieth-century America. As founder of the Photo Secession movement and editor of the influential Camera Work he eschewed the prevailing artiness of pictorialist photography, preferring clarity of vision and crystallized awareness. In galleries such as 291 and An American Place he showed and championed the work of modern artists from the US and Europe. As a photographer, editor, and gallery director Stieglitz was a powerful influence on photography and on American art in general.
