

Karl Blossfeldt: Essential Images

Karl Blossfeldt (1865-1932) was a great pioneer of botanical photography, yet he was neither a professional photographer nor a botanist. As a professor at the Kunstgewerblische Lehranstalt (Academy of Fine Arts) in Berlin, sculptor, and amateur photographer, his interest in the plant world was of an artistic and didactic nature: he concerned himself with the structure of plants, their superlative artistic form born of expedience, which he sought to make visible and comparable with the aid of photography. He published two seminal works: Art Forms in Nature (1929) and Art Forms in Nature, Second Series (1932) that had a lasting impact on the art of his day and were enthusiastically received by both the Surrealists and the New Objectivity movement. The books brought overnight fame to their author and went on to become classics in the history of art and photography. Our volume is a compilation of the best of Blossfeldt's strikingly sober yet poetic portraits of plants.
