

Portraits From Rwanda

PORTRAITS FROM RWANDA features photographs and quotes of contemporary Rwanda women. Photographs by Lewis Wilkinson. The East African nation of Rwanda is associated mostly with the genocide that occurred more than two decades ago in 1994. Today, when people learn that women hold sixty-four percent of the seats in the Rwandan Parliament, their reaction is one of surprise or disbelief. Questions immediately arise. Who are these women? What were their childhoods like? Who inspired them? What went into their decision to campaign for a position that a man traditionally held? What advice do they have for other women? When Women Lead - Interviews From Rwanda a collection of interviews, with more than 20 remarkable Rwandan women answers these questions. This companion photo book, When Women Lead - Portraits From Rwanda, contains a portrait of each of the women and a short quote from their interviews. This portrait book is available in three formats: eBook, hardcover and soft cover. For those readers that prefer a bound paper book, printed versions are available for purchase on Blurb.com. The eBook is free and may be downloaded at www.when-women-lead.com. The more comprehensive interview book will be released in the second half of 2015. Visit www.when-women-lead.com to download one free interview now and register to be notified when the full book is released. The website also contains additional information about the project including video and audio clips from the actual interviews.
