

Sun ONE Services (M&T Books)

Sun ONE (Open Net Environment) is a new generation of software for open, smart Web services. Sun ONE provides a complete open architecture, roadmap and product portfolio, fulfilling its seven-year vision and operational plan for simplifying the way in which open, Web services are created, assembled and deployed across (and beyond) the Internet. Sun ONE is designed to deliver greater productivity and lower costs for businesses, faster time to service and increase market opportunity for developers, as well as enriched user experience for consumers. Sun ONE Services provides the architectural roadmap for user context-aware Web applications and a thorough review of the technologies that can be used to implement the next-generation of intelligent user-centred applications. Programmers and developers should understand the Java technologies that support the Sun ONE platform, as well as see the design and implementation of a complete Web application based on multiple Web services. There is an inclusive demystification and comparison of the Sun ONE platform with Microsoft .NET and CORBA. Coverage includes: JNDI and LDAP; understanding WSDL (Web Services Description Language); selection of Java application servers; and usage of artificial intelligence in building Web services.
