

The Brave and Beautiful Lie

-Sometimes doing the brave thing requires a lie- Philip Strongbow, a social outcast and Yakima Tribe misfit, finds escape from his life challenges by diving into the world of reading and imagination. As a young boy, he finds comfort and escape in his grandmothers book collection and by daydreaming of far away places. He continues this method of coping with life long into adulthood. Philips withdrawal from his immediate external environment leaves him with the solitude and lack of attention that he craves. This situation changes, however, when he has the opportunity to alter his life significantly by becoming what he has always dreamed of: a brave Yakima Nation warrior. Philip struggles because becoming a warrior will require him to lie to the two most important people in his life: his mother and his boss. Is it ok if the lies are beautiful?
