

The Intelligent Womans Guide to Choosing a President: A Politics Neutral Approach

Its getting near election time. Promises, and insults are flying. Americans have been unhappy with both their president and their Congress. Many blame one political party or the other but we the American people have not gotten our moneys worth. We hired a president, vice-president, Senate, and House, and we havent gotten what we paid for. Is there a way to make better choices? Is there a way to know whether one presidential candidate will do a better job of moving the country in a safer, healthier, more prosperous direction? Why not make the candidates apply for the job like other job hunters? This book is politics neutral. As intelligent women, we know whoever we elect will be neither saint nor sinner no matter how many vicious TV ads we have to endure. We know, were dealing with ordinary, flesh and blood human beings but some are definitely more competent and more honest than others. Women are finally coming into their own as voters. They have different priorities from men and they are less willing to accept politics as usual. Perhaps its time that women make it clear the election process doesnt have to be a no-holds-barred wrestling match.
