

The History of Godmanchester, in the County of Huntingdon (Classic Reprint)

In submitting the History of Godmanchester to the consideration of the Public, the Author is aware of the rashness with which he may be accused, in having endeavoured to give to a local history an interest beyond the precincts of the place to which it relates. In the announcement of this publication, he observed, that there is no department of English Literature more interesting or more defective than local Topography. It embraces within its sphere not only the origin and decay of cities and towns, but local customs, which render us familiar with the institutions and habits of our forefathers.
