

The War Between the State: Northern California vs. Southern California

Battle lines have been drawn. Its the North vs. the South once again. But this time its the Bay Area Brahmins against the Angelenos; the cultured vs. the philistines; old money vs. new; literary vs. blockbuster; irrelevant vs. fabulous. Fortunately, this war hasnt produced any casualties, but rather a vast cache of stinging barbs, witticisms, and droll commentary on life and meaning in Southern California alongside haute attitude and preciousness in Northern California. Twains infamous shot at L.A. (a great place to live, but I wouldnt want to visit there) is matched by Gertrude Steins enduring slam on Oakland (theres no there there). Of course, there are other fronts in this timeless clash — San Francisco vs. East Bay; Berkeley vs. Hollywood; the San Fernando Valley vs. Civilization — and Jon Winokur has visited them all in this hilarious compendium of cultural dish from the front lines.
