Excerpt from The War of the Civilisations Being the Record of a Foreign Devils Experiences With the Allies in China Pei-tsang, where a pontoon bridge had been thrown across the river. Some of the troops were engaged in crossing, and there was considerable confusion as the soldiers of three nationalities became greatly mixed up at this point. Below the bridge a whole fleet of junks, which were bringing supplies up the river, as well as carrying the British naval guns, were not able to proceed until the pontoon could be opened.
