

Your College Choice: How Go To College Without Leaving Your Faith Behind

The item most ignored by college freshman when packing for school is their faith. They remember the essentials, such as clothes, deodorant, make-up, and the cellphone charger. For some reason its hard to find room for faith among all that luggage.

Personal faith is by far the most important thing to pack as someone prepares for college. It will influence the decisions and relationships students make as they navigate the exciting and intimidating years of college. When students leave it at home they start off school with no foundation. When they dont unpack it, they will enter an influential environment lacking a worldview. For faith to increase during the college years it must be acted upon. Your College Choice provides four clear and helpful choices students need to make for growing their faith instead of forgetting it.
